IT IS NOT A SUCCESS

The Heliograph in Smoky Atmosphere Is of No Account.

HOW IT IS MANIPULATED

There Was Much Disappointment Over the Outcome of the Trial at Camp Lloyd—Important in Wars.

Butte, Aug. 17.—Heliographing is one of the sciences of war that seems yet to be in its infancy, and the failure of Colonel Miller and his signal corps at Camp Lloyd to convey long distance messages was not more notable than the experience of regular army signal corps which is trying to establish a heliograph communication throughout all the Rocky mountains, and is now experimenting from the high peaks of Colorado. Colonel Miller carried communications successfully a distance of about 25 miles, but beyond that the smoky condition of the atmosphere blocked all further efforts. The colonel's ambition was to establish a record for long distance signalling in the Rocky mountains and his failure was a great disappointment not only to himself but to the officers of the National guard. Heliographing is considered of the highest importance to military operations where the atmosphere is sufficiently clear to permit the passage of the reflected sunbeams through the instrument, but the uncertainty of atmospheric conditions and the likelihood of smoke or a cloud appearing to obscure the reflection at the very time a heliographic message would be of vital importance, leads many officers to believe that heliographing will never prove an entire success in general military operations. In California they have a record of 182 miles from Shasta to St. Helena, and in Arizona, where the atmosphere is very clear and where the performances are considered remarkable, the record for long distance heliographing is 183 miles. It is claimed that the regular army has successfully used the heliograph in Indian campaigns, and that the British army employed it in Egypt and India. Flag signalling is limited in range and the signals are open to observation by the enemy, while the heliograph flash may be seen as far as a telescope can pierce the horizon and is visible only to persons within the direct line of its range.

A heliograph is nothing but a small mirror mounted on a tripod and having attachments by which a reflection from its surface may be brought to bear upon any desired point with accuracy, and held there. The instruments used at Camp Lloyd are about 4½ inches square and weigh probably 10 pounds. As the distance at which a flash may be seen depends upon the size of the glass, there have been manufactured all sizes of instruments, the largest ones being 20x35 inches, which have been used by the army signal corps, and it is claimed that it renders the use of the telescope unnecessary. The method of operation of a heliograph is very simple. In front of the glass is a shutter which moves on a pivot. When the shutter is closed the mirror is obscured and gives forth no reflection; when it is open there is a steady gleam of light upon the point upon which it is aimed. By slightly opening and closing the shutter the reflection is broken up into long and short flashes, which correspond to the dots and dashes of the Morse telegraph code.

Setting two instruments aligned upon each other is the most difficult operation. The flash has a spread of 50 feet to a mile, so that at a distance of 50 miles it may be seen at any point within 1,250 feet of its center; but at 50 miles a patch of ground 2,500 feet wide is a very indefinite thing unless there is some large object to mark it to the eye. For this reason the operator at the indefinite point first brings his glass to bear upon the better defined one and then, when he has located it, he catches a flash from the other, but as soon as this is done the alignment is speedily made.

Near Camp Lloyd is a high mountain peak that can be seen for a hundred miles. On the summit of this peak is a high hill upon which the corps took its position and awaited a signal from the corps that went to Jefferson peak. The men made the first attempt to communicate with the home corps when they reached Camp Creek, a distance of 25 miles, and on the morning of the second day out a blinding, white gleam, as from a distant star, was flashed on the corps on the hill at Camp Lloyd. In that distance the atmosphere was perfectly clear, and as the men on Camp Creek knew where to point their instrument, communication was easily opened and carried on. Beyond Camp Creek, however, all was haze, and although the two corps communicated by telegraph, they could not catch each other with the heliograph.

GAMBLERS ARRAIGNED.

Moses Lenz Says He Is Not Guilty of the Charge.

Butte, Aug. 17.—The gamblers recently arrested were arraigned before Judge Speer this morning. The only man to plead was Moses Lenz and he said he was not guilty. William Byther, Henry S. Morris, John K. Ross, Richard J. Post, James A. Custer and Herman Brummell took until Monday to plead. John K. Kirk appeared as attorney for nearly all of the defendants.

H. T. Sloan and William McMahon, the advices concerning the forgers, were also arraigned and will plead on Monday.

Constable John Reid for manslaughter, and Gustav Freidlander, for receiving stolen property, were ordered to appear in court next Saturday for arraignment.

Shelton Pays the Freight.

The mandamus case against C. S. Booth to compel him to return to the clerk's office the coroner's transcript in the explosion cases, came up for further hearing before Judge Speer this morning. The case having been continued from last Saturday in order to take the testimony of Clerk Sheldon.

The latter testified that he had notified Mr. Booth that Attorney Sheldon wanted the transcript. The testimony also showed that Mr. Sheldon had notified Mr. Booth that some time before Mr. Booth got it and Judge Speer ordered that hereafter the papers should remain in the clerk's office the same as other records and the case was dismissed and the costs taxed up to Mr. Sheldon, to which the latter took exception.

Auction in Department II.

The sale of one-sixteenth interest in the Monitor mine, belonging to the estate of J. H. Williams, deceased, came up before Judge McMahon this morning for confirmation. The sale took place several weeks ago and the interest was purchased by Charles Haas for $2,000. When the matter was presented to the court this morning C. F. Booth handed in a written bid of $2,500, a 10 per cent. increase. Mr. Haas promptly raised it, and then J. K. McDonald put it up to $2,500. Mr. Haas said he would raise and the court said it would give each party an opportunity to say what the property was worth or what they would be willing to pay for it, and then the bids would be close, for the court room would not be turned into an auction room. Mr. Haas then wrote out a bid for $4,000, which was read out before McDonald's bid had been prepared and the latter, again raised the bid and made it $4,500. Mr. Haas' attorney complained that McDonald had an unfair advantage and they wanted another chance at it, but the judge declined the auction to be held and the sale was confirmed, and the purchase price was at once handed over to the clerk.

McDonald's bid was made for the Anaconda people, who had previously acquired all the interests in the Monitor. The opposing bids were made in behalf of F. A. Heinze. The Monitor is a location covering the Ground Squirrel mine, and the purchase of the Williams interest to-day completes the ownership of the Anaconda people.

Farewell Performance.

Butte, Aug. 17.—Professor Gentry's dog and pony show delighted two big audiences again to-day and at the farewell performance to-night, and every seat was filled. The show has played eight performances in the city this week, and everyone of them has been greeted by an enormous audience that tested the capacity of the tent. Professor Gentry has a thoroughly wonderful exhibition of the dog and pony show of its kind ever seen here, and is deserving of the liberal patronage that he received. The dogs and ponies, including "Butte," the new one born here, will move to Anaconda to-morrow, where they will exhibit Monday.

At they had breakfasted and it was understood that they should at once be taken on to Bozeman, but they were again compelled to wait three or four hours but notwithstanding the inconvenience caused them by the railroad company, the soldier boys had an enjoyable time at the encampment.

MINING TALK.

The Granite Mountain Company Looking Over the Catastrophe Country.

Butte, Aug. 17.—Dr. J. M. Merrill, one of the principal owners of the Bimetallie and Granite mines, is in the city. Dr. Merrill states that when the two mines were shut down, several months ago, the company started in to work the tailings and they have about 800,000 ounces besides a large quantity of gold. The company has sent an expert to Basin to examine the Bullion mine on Jack creek, about 10 miles north of town. The Bullion has been bonded to the original owners, Fisher Bros., for $40,000, but owing to the financial difficulties that overtook the company it was unable to take up the bond when it became due in June, and it passed to the original owners, Fisher Bros., in default of the first payment of $10,000.

Many experts have examined the property for Dr. Merrill, the last having been sent out yesterday and the doctor will remain in Butte until he receives a reply. The reports made by the other experts are said to have been so flattering that the company was not altogether satisfied with them. The Granite Bros. expended about $7,000 in developing and prospecting the Bullion and it is claimed that it presents the most favorable showing of any mine in that vicinity.

Charles E. Perrine writes from Whitehall that they are still sinking on the ledge of the recent gold discovery, and that they are now down 25 feet, at which depth the ledge makes a better showing than at the surface. They intend to sink 50 feet and then ship a carload of gold. So far they are well satisfied with the showing, says Mr. Perrine.
